PIANO FACTS.

A LEADING firm of Piano manufacturers have recently published a brochure styled "Facts," which contains so much interesting and valuable information that we feel assured no apology will be needed for reproducing the little work entire for the benefit of our readers.

AS TO FACTS.

FACTS are but the result of experience representing things done, acts, deeds, from which are established truths. A fact must be a truth. That portion of the public interested in the Piano question has more frequently than otherwise, when seeking light, been brought to realize that it has not been dealt with according to truth or facts.

A RIPE EXPERIENCE.

A valuable experience covering many years, and the widest possible range, in the manufacture, handling and sale of fine pianos is sufficient warrant for this presentation of facts for the guidance of those who may be interested. We have nothing to conceal, but have every reason for wanting the real facts concerning pianos to become as widely disseminated as possible, and we believe no disinterested person could be found who would be inclined to dispute the truth of the statements made herein.

By taking heed of the facts that follow it should be comparatively an easy matter for the average person to choose a piano wisely, to care for it so as to keep it in the best possible order for the greatest length of time, and always to obtain the best results it is capable of giving.

CHOOSING A PIANO.

Perhaps the most important transaction in the life of the individual, so far as the piano question is concerned, is in the selection of an instrument. Very few persons have occasion to choose more than one piano in the course of their existence, and if in such case, as frequently happens, a mistake in the selection is made, it means piano disappointment for life.

An instrument may sound well in a spacious sales-room, where there are no furnishings or hangings to interfere with the sound, and be found entirely different and wanting in tone in a furnished appartment. Good judges even are sometimes deceived in this way, and but few persons are able to make a wise decision. This mistake may be avoided by choosing a piano with a sustaining quality of tone, that is, when a note is struck in any part except the extreme treble, it should continue to sound for some time thereafter. This will be found the best general test of a piano, for one with a sweet, sustaining quality of tone will sound well in any room.

CHOOSING A PIANO.
Continued.

ONE all-important point in the selection of a piano is to be certain that it is made from thoroughly seasoned materials. Assurance in this particular can be had only by purchasing from a maker whose reputation would suffer were his name placed on an inferior instrument. Some makers rely chiefly on reputations won by founders of their houses instead of the present quality of their manufacture. As a rule no mistake is made where preference is given to the maker who is rapidly rising to fame solely upon the merits of the instrument he produces. In the latter case the pianos are not only more reasonable in price, but they are generally better instruments than those manufactured by firms that depend upon former reputations, which possiblythey are slowly but surely losing. On the other hand a wide berth should be given to so-called "cheap pianos." They are a delusion and a snare. An experiment with them never fails to prove costly in the end. A really good piano always commands a fair price, about midway between the fancy figures asked by makers who are living on past reputations, and the ruinously low figures at which irresponsible makers are compelled to sell in order to make sales at all.

WHY KRELL PIANOS LEAD.

OF LATE years "A distinctively original creation, both as regards the scale and manner of construction"— The Krell Piano — has forged so rapidly to the front rank in the piano world, as to fairly distance all competitors, and some pertinent facts concerning this remarkable instrument would therefore seem to be in order. As the result of progressive improvements, made by master minds and mechanics, backed by unusual resources, in building up a new and perfect system of piano construction, Krell Pianos have reached the highest standard of excellence. They are the only pianos now made combining all the essential qualifications requisite for a thoroughly artistic piano. That this statement is not extravagant is borne out by the unhesitating stamp of public approval.

The beautiful tone, perfection of scale, susceptibility of touch, elegance of case, together with the superior quality of materials used and skilled workmanship employed in the manufacture of Krell Pianos, all have a part in the finished instrument, which has been aptly described as the "Acme of the Piano Maker's Art."

TONE.

For their wonderful volume and exquisite quality of tone. The Krell Upright and Grand Pianos are preëminent. While the tone is clear, and full and brilliant, yet it retains that sympathetic mellowness so pleasing and fascinating to the refined musical taste.

TOUCH.

The Krell metal flange repeating actions are unsurpassed for their ease and pliability. Being light, firm and responsive to the touch, they do not fatigue the performer upon the least exertion, as is the case with most other makes. As none but the finest materials are used and the greatest possible care is exercised in their manufacture, sluggishness and sticking of keys are completely overcome. The keys are of the finest quality of ivory, and French-filled dead-finished Ebony Sharps.

SCALE.

The scale of the Krell is 7¼ octaves, is scientifically correct, even and perfect, and so devised, having only one bearing, that the tension of the strings runs perfectly straight, and is equally distributed. This is one reason why Krell Pianos are so easy to tune, and why they stand so well in tune. They are three stringed and have a nickel plated Capo D'Astro bar running throughout the entire scale.

Digitized by Google

PEDAL ACTION.

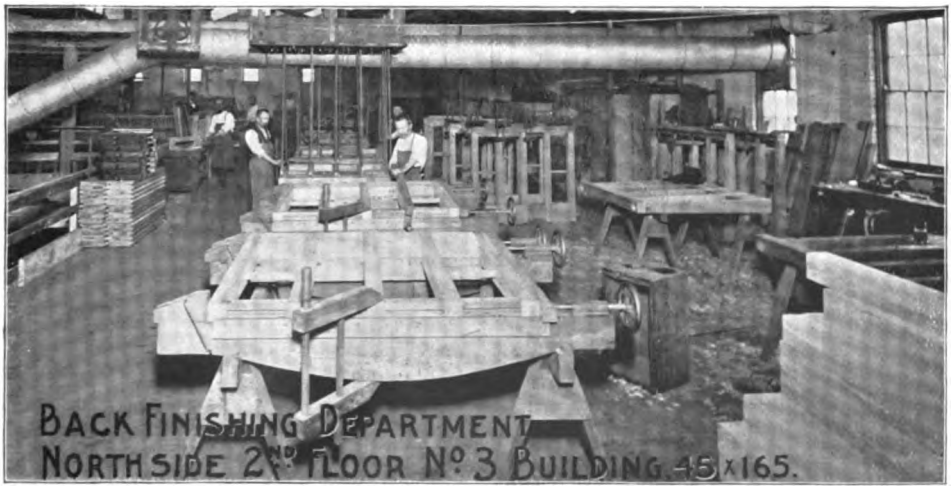

THE Krell Piano Pedal action is made of light but strong iron castings in the place of wood, which obviates the constant liability of warping, squeaking or getting out of order. It is an established fact that more complaint has been made of squeaking pedals than of the badly out of tune piano. This has been done away with by the introduction of our Patent pedal action.

ELEGANT CASE WORK.

The case work of the Krell Piano is elegant in design and beautiful in finish. The cases are made from thoroughly seasoned wood, double veneered inside and out. They are finished in fancy Mahogany, French Burl Walnut, Circassian Walnut, Italian Walnut and English Quartered Oak. We also manufacture to order, from special designs, cases to match any style of furniture and in any kind of wood.

A GRAND PIANO IN UPRIGHT FORM.

The full flanged metal plates of Krell Pianos are cast from an improved pattern which is on the principle of a Grand. They not only embody great strength but give to the Krell Uprights the qualifications of a Grand, making them in reality a Grand Piano in upright form.

SOUNDING BOARDS.

KRELL Sounding Boards are made of the very best Balsam fir, which has wonderful resonance and acoustic powers. The dimensions of the Krell Sounding Boards are greater than those used in any other make, and in this fact is partial explanation of the wonderful volume of tone for which the Krell is pre-eminent.

BACKS.

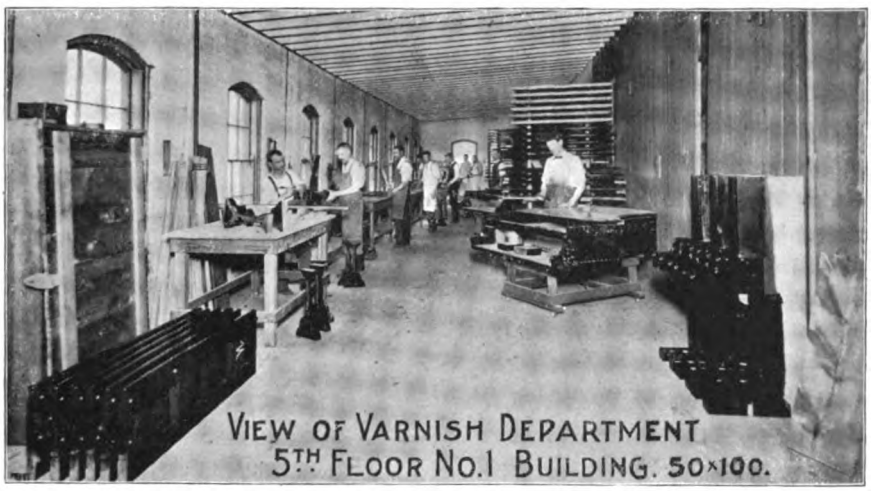

The main support of Upright Pianos are the backs. All Krell Piano backs are made out of solid three-inch Ash, and so constructed that they possess the greatest possible endurance. Instead of covering the backs of our uprights with wire muslin, which is no protection for the instrument whatever, but serves as a sereen to hide the defects in the manufacture, we leave them open so that the quality of our work and material can be seen and appreciated.

PIN BLOCKS.

Krell pin blocks are quintuple, cross-banded, quarter-sawed Maple, secured by a metal flange, the most important factor in keeping pianos in tune, it being next to impossible for the tuning pins to slip back; when once placed, there they stay.

TUNING KRELL PIANOS.

REFERRING to the question of tuning, purchasers of Krell pianos are always advised, where it is possible for them to do so, to send for tuners in the employ of firms representing the Krell Piano Co. It is natural that a firm's employes should take more interest in an instrument they sell than any strange tuner would; consequently the instrument would be well taken care of, always give satisfaction and last longer. In any event always employ a good tuner, as a poor tuner is worse than none.

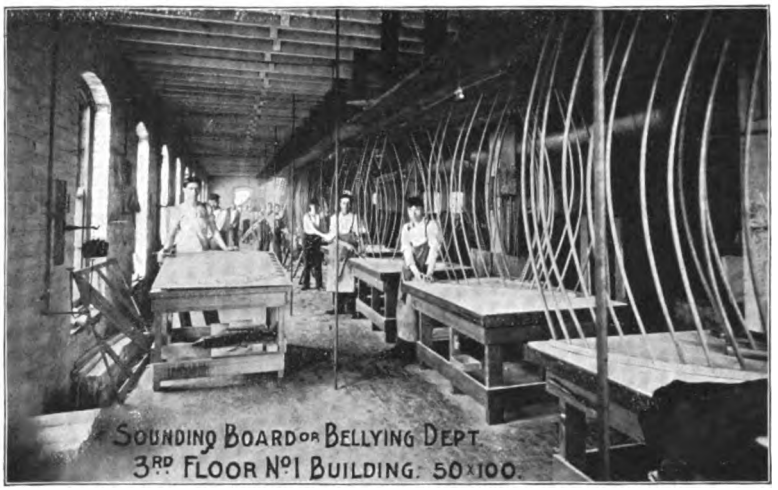

KRELL GRANDS.

The scientific points of construction in Krell Grands are worthy of special mention. By the use of our Improved Self Supporting, Center Strain, Full Metal Frame, the case proper is relieved entirely from the great tension which it otherwise is compelled to bear. This Metal frame is so constructed that the entire strain is upon the longitudinal center section of the metal frame, the braces of which are so arranged that one-half their thickness and strength is above the plane of the strings and one-half below the plane of the strings. This feature renders it impossible for the frame to bend or warp in any manner whatever. Attached to this metal frame is the sounding board tuning pin block and the strings, and as they are attached to the metal frame independent entirely of the wooden frame work of the case, they cannot be affected by the partial yielding of the wooden frame work during great or sudden climatical changes: therefore the constant liability of the piano to lower its pitch or get out of tune is lessened in a great degree. When the different parts have been adjusted securely to the metal frame it is then finally placed in the case proper.

Another important advantage gained by the use of our metal frame is dispensing with large bolts which other manufacturers are compelled to use in fastening their iron plates to the wooden frame of the case. These bolts, passing through the sounding board at numerous places, break or hem the waves of vibration, and they are, in consequence, very injurious to the resonance power of the sounding board.

Further, we are the only manufacturers using the balsam fir wood for sounding boards, the valuable qualities of which were re-discovered by Albert Krell in the year 1884, and which is now successfully used by all the leading violin makers for constructing their very best instruments. Then again, we have another very marked improvement in the construction of our bass bridges, the theory of which is the same as the theory used in the construction of the violin bridge; take for example a violin, and in place of the scroll bridge put a solid block of wood, then it will be found that the sound has been deadened. Now instead of using a solid bass bridge, like other manufacturers do, we perforate ours, and thereby secure the same benefit that is given by the scroll-bridge on a violin.

Last but not least, is our metal pedal action, which cannot squeak or stick, as do the wooden pedal actions of other makers. This surely should be a source of satisfaction to all performers as they cannot be annoyed by the constant squeaking or the sticking of the pedals.

ENDURANCE

A careful perusal of the foregoing facts concerning the manufacture of Krell Pianos should leave no doubt of their endurance. We offer them on their merits alone, and not upon any purchased reputation. Give the Krell a trial and you will join in the universal verdict that it is the "Acme of the Piano Maker's Art."

Digitized by Google

THE piano purchaser should look to the "standing" of the man or firm that offers him a guarantee. All makers and dealers give guarantees, but will they all honor them, if demanded? You can feel safe with the Krell, because we stake our reputation on every piano, and we are financially responsible for all we guarantee. With each Piano we give a six year's absolute guarantee against any defects in material or workmanship.

GUARANTEE.

With ordinary usage and good care a good piano may be kept in perfect order for many years. Indeed, there is scarcely any reasonable limit to the life of a good piano where proper care is given it. The instrument should be closed when not in use. It must not be left closed for long periods, but should be opened occasionally and daylight allowed to fall upon the keys, or else the ivory may turn yellow. A piano should not be placed in a damp room, nor left in a draught of air. Dampness is its most dangerous enemy, causing the strings and tuning pins to rust, the cloth used in the construction of the keys and action to swell, whereby the mechanism will move sluggishly, or often stick together. This occurs chiefly in the rainy season, and the best pianos made of the most thoroughly seasoned materials are necessarily affected more or less by dampness, the absorption being rapid. Extreme heat is scarcely less injurious. A piano should not be placed very near an open fire, or heated stove, or over or close to hot air furnace registers. Moths are very destructive to the cloth and felt used in pianos, and may be avoided by placing a lump of camphor wrapped in soft paper in the inside cover of the piano, care being taken to renew the camphor from time to time. In cleaning usually all that is required is to dust the case lightly with a piece of cheese-cloth. Do not use a coarse cloth or feather duster under any circumstances. When necessary the case may be lightly sponged with luke-warm water and a little castile soap, then rinsed with clean luke-warm water and rapidly dried and polished, using a clean piece of cheese-cloth for this purpose. Do not attempt to use any of the numerous "piano polishes" on the case. It were better when the case may seem to need polishing, in the event that no reliable piano dealer is close at hand, to apply for advice and assistance to some competent furniture dealer.

REMARKS ON TUNING.

ANY piano will occasionally get out of tune on account of the stretching or contracting of the wire strings. Before sending pianos from the factory they are tuned from eight to ten times, so that the strings will become thoroughly settled. Yet during the first year, after the piano is in the home, it should be regularly tuned at least two or three times, as the atmosphere in a private house is generally very different from that of a warm factory, and any change of temperature, especially if sudden, will put the piano more or less out of tune. After a year's proper tuning, a good piano will not require tuning more than once or twice a year, provided care is taken that the temperature of the room is kept as uniform as possible, or at least that no sudden change from heat to cold, or vice versa takes place.

HOME OF KRELL PIANOS.

Seven separate and distinct buildings, bounded by Ninth, Harriet and Richmond Streets, Cincinnati, Ohio, constitute the factories of The Krell Piano Co. These buildings cover a space of 190x240 feet. They are light, airy and commodious, and are fitted with every approved modern appliance known to the Piano Maker's Art. Every convenience necessary to the comfort of the several hundred skilled workmen to whom constant employment is given, is supplied. The plant has a capacity for turning out one hundred and twenty-five finished pianos each week, and as an indication of the superior merit and growing popularity of the Krell Piano, we have merely to mention the fact that it is necessary to run the factory at its full capacity, and frequently to run over time. Enlargement of facilities for manufacturing, notwithstanding the Krell factory is now one of tne most extensive, as well as one of the most celebrated establishments of its kind in the world, is one of the problems to be solved in the near future. With the precedence already gained and the advantage of unlimited resources at hand, the outlook for the Krell Piano Co., could hardly be more flattering.

WHERE KRELL PIANOS ARE SOLD

The Krell Piano Co. is represented by only one leading dealer in every large city. If not represented in your city, write direct to the Home Office, and your communication will receive prompt attention. When desired, the most liberal arrangements are made as to payments, and terms are given that will be satisfactory to purchasers no matter where located.

Persons contemplating the purchase of a piano who do not investigate the merits of the Krell before buying will be doing themselves an injustice.

Dedication

TO HENRY CARTER ADAMS

The treasured wisdom of ages
Tells ever the same refrain,
The measure of might in the fight for right
Is never brawn but brain.

Though we're proud of the sword and sinew,
Of our men of fighting fame;
Though we honor the brave, and weep o'er the grave,
Where we've written a martyr's name,

Yet greater than these in his words and works,
In the good that he leaves behind,
In his wisdom's scope—the nations' hope—
Is the man with the master mind.

Henry Carter Adams.

HENRY CARTER ADAMS was born in Davenport, Iowa, December 31st, 1852 He received his bachelor's degree at Iowa College, and after teaching a year, spent some time at Andover Theological Seminary. Having always had an inclination for newspaper work, he was considering a change from preparation for a theological to preparation for a journalistic career by accepting a position as reporter on the New York Times, when he was honored by the offer of a fellowship at Johns Hopkins University. He finally decided to accept the fellowship, upon the advice, it is said, of Mr. E. L. Godkin, then of the Nation. If this be true, economists owe a debt of gratitude to Mr. Godkin, for once at the University, the young student was so filled with its spirit that he gave up all thoughts of a journalistic career. This enthusiasm for academic work was due to many influences, among which was the contact with so many brilliant young minds afforded by the university, some of whom had studied in Germany and brought back the German university spirit; but—chief of all the influences was that of two men who were lecturing at Johns Hopkins at that time, Judge Thomas M. Cooley and the late President Walker. In 1878, the doctor's degree was conferred upon him, his examiners being the Historian Bancroft and President Walker. Appointed by courtesy Fellow in Political Science, he spent a year and a half in Germany, studying at Heidelberg under Knies and Bluntschli, and at Berlin under Wagner and Engel. After his return, he lectured in quick succession at Cornell, the University of Michigan and Johns Hopkins, and in 1887 was appointed Professor of Political Economy and Finance at the University of Michigan.

In this brief outline, two things have probably suggested themselves to the reader. Here was a young man evidently endowed with great natural ability, and here were names in Political Science and Political Economy, that represent the highest achievments of scholarship. The contact between such a student and such masters could not but be productive of interesting results. It is our honor to be assigned the task of reviewing these results.

Digitized by Google

Professor Adams' first work received favorable attention. This was his doctor's thesis published under the influence of Wagner, in Tübinger Zeitschrift für die gesammte Staatswissenschaft, 1879, under title Zur Geschichte der Besteuerung in den Vereinigten Staaten von Amerika in der Periode von 1789–1816. This thesis is familiar to American readers as Taxation in the United States, 1789–1816, published in Johns·Hopkins University Studies, 1884. In this work Professor Adams gave evidence of the clearness of insight and power of analysis of which he was later to show himself so eminently possessor. These qualities are just as apparent in an article on Socialism which was published in the Penn Monthly for April of that year. This article shows true historical mindedness, and affords consolation neither for those who favor unconditional socialism, nor for those who just as unconditionally condemn it. The principle of free competition, he says, is the object at which socialism is aiming its blows, and while socialism is as a system untenable, it is right in claiming that the remedy must lie in a proper restraint on the operation of the principle of free competition. Not an abolishment of freedom, but freedom of the right sort, is the solution; liberty with responsibility. Among the most interesting expressions in this article, from our view of twenty years later, are those concerning the duty of Political Economy in America. He says, "America must repudiate the centralizing tendency of German Economy, because that tendency is opposed to the ideas upon which the government is founded; but, on the other hand, another century of unrestrained activity of private enterprise will itself contradict the theory of freedom, and destroy the government. From this dilemma must arise an American Political Economy — an economy which is to be legal rather than industrial in its character." How interesting, in the light of the American Political Economy that has been since developed, in the light of Professor Adams place in it, and in the light of certain industrial phenomena, like trusts, which have appeared.

In January, 1881, appeared in the New Englander, from his pen, an article on The Irish Land Question, and in November of the same year, one on Democracy, a consideration of that subject which affords some satisfaction as one turns from most of the books of this title that are flooding the market at present. Nowhere has the subject been more vitally touched than in these words: "Democracy does not necessarily mean, as usually employed, a definite form of government. It is rather the expression of political individualism. Constitutional governments are not necessarily democratic; nor, on the other hand, are democratic ideas among a people incompatible with a choice of monarchical forms. Democracy is not merely a political form, but constitutes an element in the general life of the present age."

On the Education of Statesmen appeared in the Princeton Review for January, 1884. In this article Professor Adams took the position that among a people that has adopted laissez faire as the maxim of control in its public policy, a higher political education can hardly flourish, inasmuch as among such a people all thought tends to effect a negation of activity. Professor Adams was of the opinion, however, that a change was taking place in this regard in the United States, and the past few years have seen a verification of his prophesy.

The Forum of July, 1886, contained Shall we Muzzle the Anarchists? in which he emphasizes once more a favorite idea, by arguing that danger comes not from too great freedom of speech, but from too little sense of personal responsibility. About this time the demand for a paper read before the Constitution Club of New York, lead to its expansion and publication under the title the State in Relation to Industrial Action. This treatise begins with a consideration of laissez faire as a maxim of control, and states that, while much the doctrine contains seems true, the authority of the English Economy is shattered beyond recovery, its fundamental error being that it regards the state as a necessary evil. But the German political philosophy, he argues, is as erroneous in considering the state an organism complete within itself. The problem is to harmonize governmental activity and private enterprise, society being the entity about which all our reasoning should centre. The social harmony may be restored by extending the duties of the state, especially along two lines; by allowing it to determine the plane of competitive action, and by allowing it to realize for society the benefits of monopoly. The choice, he says, lies between individualism and socialism, compromise being impossible. To the former of these Professor Adams is willing to adhere, believing that the solution of the problem lies in an extension of the old principle of personal responsibility, which must be accepted fearlessly and applied without reserve.

Inasmuch as this idea of laying greater emphasis on the principle of personal responsibility is a favorite one of Professor Adams, it may not be out of place to define the meaning of responsibility as here used. It does not mean such responsibility as that of all of us before the law the responsibility of the public officer guilty of embezzlement, or of the student who rides his bicycle on the walks. It means something more comprehensive, as the responsibility of the tax-payer for the use to which his money is put. It means responsiveness to, or vital interest in, everything with which we have relations. It is a responsibility that is self-executing and not dependent upon a penalty for its enforcement. The interest of every alumnus to his Alma Mater constitutes in this sense a responsibility for the welfare of the University. And Professor Adams does not insist that that form of ojective property has been discovered which can create a sense of this responsibility; but just as the astronomer can determine that there must be a star somewhere influencing the movements of known planets, so it is reasonable to assume that there is a form of property to be discovered which can create this responsibility, or responsiveness. Then the trust will not crush heartlessly the small employer, then the small employer will not bleed his workmen, and the workmen will not resort to destructive strikes to gain their rights, for each will have shares in this peculiar form of property that will make them inter-responsive and harmonious.

As president of the American Economic Association, Professor Adams delivered an address before the session of December, 1898, which attracted universal attention. In Economics and Jurisprudence, the title under which the address was published in Economic Studies, he calls attention to the confusion in economic theory and the discord in industrial life, and explains them as due to an inadequate expression by formal law of fundamental industrial rights; the conception of industrial rights having evolved from the individualistic stage, while the theories of jurisprudence are those of eighteenth century individualism. The point of view, he says, has been shifted from the individual to the whole; the social interest, the social impulse, the social aim, must be more clearly recognized by formal rules of conduct. Provided two things in particular find this formal expression, Professor Adams is willing to trust the future to voluntary individual association. The two things are rights and responsibility; rights that are fundamental, and a responsibility that works in the same manner to both parties to a contract. Too long has consideration been given to rights alone, the problem is one of rights and responsibility. This address as translated for Schmoller's Jahrbuch für Gesetzgebung und Volkwirtschaft im Deutschen Reich for 1898, under the title Volkwirtschaft und Rechtsordnung.

So far we have called attention only to Professor Adams' monographs and shorter articles, and not to all of these. His first work, we have seen, was one in Finance, a subject upon which he contributed during these years many articles to magazines and reviews. Finally in 1887, appeared Public Debts: An Essay in the Science of Finance, the first comprehensive work on the subject to appear in the United States. One of the important lessons of the civil war was that the finances of a government in such crises cannot be administered in an empirical way without sore disaster. This work was one of the scientific treatises brought forth by this lesson, and is considered an authority on the administration of public debts. The chapter on the management of finances in time of war was translated for the use of the Japanese Government at the outbreak of the late war with China, and during the past year the entire work has been translated.

The Science of Finance, An Investigation of Public Expenditures and Public Revenues appeared in the fall of 1898. This is Professor Adams' greatest contribution to scholarship. It is a work of such magnitude and of such aspirations that it would be impossible to attempt an analysis of it here. It was awaited by scholars with great expectations, and these expectations were not disappointed. At once recognized as "a lasting contribution," and as marking "a turning point in the history of American political literature" and "an epoch in the discussions of fiscal problems." The chief merit of the work has been declared to be the masterly power of analysis in the representation of the newer and saner views. Professor Seligman, of Columbia, than whom no one is more competent to speak, said: "It is perhaps no exaggeration to say that Professor Adams is at the head of those American scholars who have grasped the essential spirit of modern industrial life; and it is likewise no exaggeration to claim for this volume the distinction of being one of the most original, the most suggestive and the most brilliant productions that have made their appearance in recent decades."

We have found the exposition of Professor Adams literary work so interesting that our space is nearly exhausted and half has not been told. His life has been devoted to many other activities than writing and teaching. He is one of the editorial committee of the International Journal of Ethics. He was chairman of the transportation department of the eleventh census. He has been since 1888 statistician of the Inter-State Commerce Commission, and for the past year or more has been conducting a statistical investigation, for the use of a committee of Congress, of the decrease in the cost to the railroads of carrying United States mail. During the past summer he had at work under him in this investigation some twelve or fifteen students and four college professors.

A word may not be out of place here, suggested by this varied activity of Professor Adams. It seems to us that it represents new and happy features in both American scholarship and American government. It indicates that the government is learning to utilize trained and expert men in the investigations of its problems. Is it not safe at any rate to say that these labors of Professor Adams and such brilliant work as Professor Burr's in the Venezuelan boundary investigation suggest an answer to the familiar charge that in this country scholars are growing out of touch with practical affairs.

Of the two so-called schools of Political Economy, Professor Adams has identified himself with the Historical school. He was one of the founders of the American Economic Association, 1885, and contributed on the side of the new school, to the considerations of method and principle in Science Economic Discussion, 1886. Cossa classifies him as intermediate between the two groups of the "German-American" economists; one, the "Historical" group, being represented by Professor Ely; and the other "Pure Science" group, being represented by Professor Patten. We would not be justified in attempting to classify him here. We know from what has been presented in these pages that he was not carried away by the German influence, and that he does not give too high a value to the German theory of the state. On the other hand, he insists that the individualistic theory as represented in English jurisprudence has reached the limits of its evolution. He is the representative of such an economy as he once prophesied must be established in the United States: "an economy that rests on history, that is motived by a passion for liberty, and that is directed and limited by a knowledge of jurisprudence."

Upon his personal characteristics it would be out of place for us to dwell here. His lovable disposition, his charming modesty before classes and his kindness to his students, are facts of happy memory to those who no longer work with him, and of pleasant realizaton to those who are so fortunate as to be now sitting at his feet.

The University of Michigan.

THE University of Michigan is a part of the public educational system of the State. The governing body of the institution is a Board of Regents, elected by popular vote for terms of eight years, as provided in the Constitution of the State. In accordance with the law of the State, the University aims to complete and crown the work that is begun in the public schools, by furnishing ample facilities for liberal education in literature, science, and the arts, and for thorough professional study of engineering, medicine, pharmacy, law, and dentistry. Through the aid that has been received from the United States and from the State, it is enabled to offer its privileges, with only moderate charges, to all persons of either sex, who are qualified for admission. While Michigan has endowed her University primarily for the higher education of her own sons and daughters, it must be understood that she also opens the doors of the institution to all students, wherever their homes. It is in this broad, generous, and hospitable spirit, that the University has been founded, and that it endeavors to do its work.—University Calendar.

A Review of the Football Season of 1899.

FRANK STANTON SIMONS.

IN reviewing a football season it is always a pleasure to be able to trace the development of the team through the early weeks of training, to chronicle the victories as they increase in importance, and to round out the review with the history of a grand game which places the team at the head of the list of college elevens. A review of the football season of 1899, however, involves the story of the rise and fall of the University of Michigan's team. The eleven reached its highest state of perfection in the early part of November. From that time on its work deteriorated and it was not equal to the task of making even a strong bid for the final and most important game of the year.

There were enough old 'Varsity men back to give the coaches the nucleus of a team with which to begin, and some weeks later the return of Cunningham and Street, of the '98 eleven, strengthened the team immensely. In addition to the old players, there were numerous new men of more than ordinary ability, although the coaches complained of a lack of heavy men for places back of the line. The failure of the team to end the season in better style cannot be charged to a want of material.

The coaches planned their work well. They started out with the avowed intention of making Michigan's defense perfect before they devoted their attention to offensive play and the finer points of the game. It was not until the Notre Dame game that the 'Varsity gave any promise of ultimate development into a first class team. Notre Dame's strength had been overestimated and Michigan went into the game with spirit and determination, but as soon as it was seen that Notre Dame could not score, the playing of the 'Varsity fell off distressingly. The Alumni team played far better football the week following than did the 'Varsity, and the latter was saved from defeat by luck and the referee's whistle. The slovenly way in which the men went at their work called forth severe criticism from the coaches, whose particular grievance was against the old players and the spiritless way they went into the practice. The October games closed with that against Illinois, and although Michigan barely won the game, the 'Varsity proved effectually that the efforts of the coaches had been rewarded in one respect. Michigan's defense was splendid.

Progress in the second stage of development was visible daily, although accidents had deprived Michigan of the services of several good players. The offensive work of the 'Varsity against Virginia at Detroit was brilliant at times but not sustained and the lack of team play, particularly in the backfield, was the first sign of the weakness which explains to a large extent the loss of the last game of the season. Then came the spectacular game against Pennsylvania at Philadelphia. Michigan made a splendid showing and did credid to the whole west. Hopes that the western championship would again fall to Michigan were raised high at Ann Arbor and critics picked Michigan as the leader in western football. Hopes and prophecies alike proved false, for the 'Varsity slumped. Michigan showed very poor form against Case and Kalamazoo, but the student body did not lose confidence and believed the team would defeat the strong Wisconsin eleven. The sad story of that Thanksgiving Day game is too fresh in the minds of Michigan men to require more than a passing notice. Michigan was outplayed at every point by a team which was not superior individually and in no better physical condition than she was.

Michigan's fatal weakness was her lack of team work. And team work was lacking because of the constant shifting which went on in the back field during the whole of November and the failure of most of the men to help one another when Michigan had the ball. It must be said that an unfortunate combination of circumstances made it impossible for all the men who lined up in the Thanksgiving Day game to play together in a single game during the last three weeks of the season. Yet the result of the game demonstrated beyond a doubt that good, aggressive team work is more to be desired than star individual players, who will not get into every play, and that constant shifting about of men from one position to another inevitably handicaps team work. The overwhelming defeat administered by the Badgers was hard to bear but it taught Michigan a lesson which she will profit by in the future. The school of experience is often a harsh one, but the methods are thorough.

Good Government Club.

THE U. of M. Good Government Club is an association of students, officers and instructors of the University, having for its purpose, as expressed in its by-laws, "to promote inquiry by its members into the laws of politics and economics, and their application to the furtherance of human well-being." This purpose it aims to accomplish by securing distinguished citizens to lecture before it, by giving prizes for essays upon subjects within the scope of its purposes, and in such other ways as may be practicable.

In the year 1898-9, the following named gentlemen appeared upon the lecture course of the club.

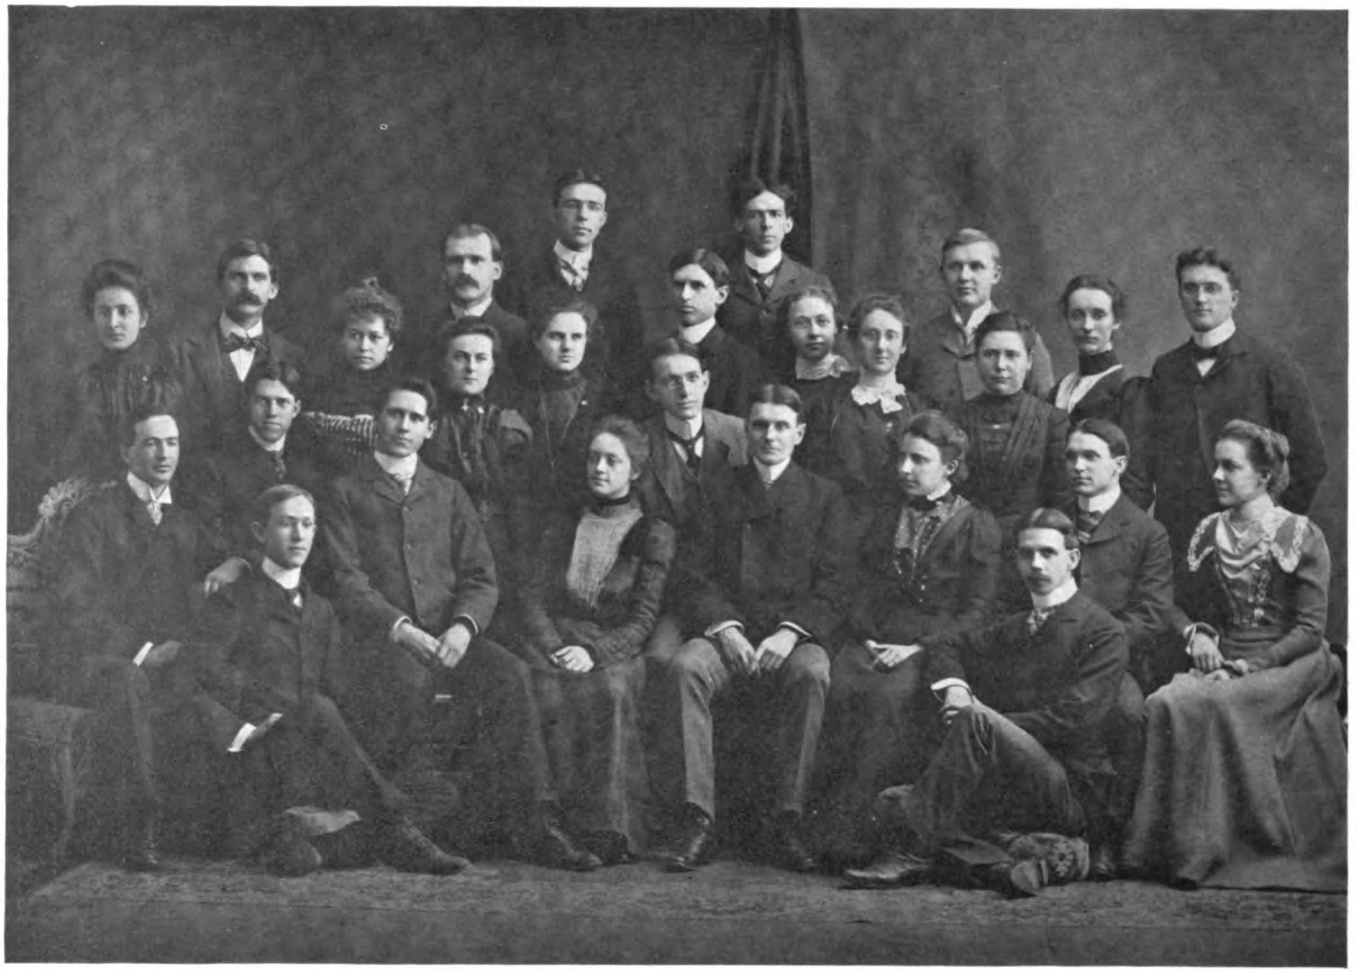

HON. WILLIAM DUDLEY FOULKE, . . . "Civil Service Reform"
HON. HERBERT WELSH, . . "Progress of Civic Reform in America"
PROF. FRANK TAUSSIG, ... "Taxation of Monopolies"
MR. EUGENE V. DEBS, . . "The Laboring Man's Interest in Good Government"
HON. WILLIAM J. BRYAN, ... "Imperialism"

The Course announced for the present year contains the following named:

DR. ALBION W. SMALLS, ... "The Meaning of Trusts"
DR. EDWARD W. BEMIS, ... "Monopoly Problems"
HON. JOHN S. CROSBY, ... "The Single Tax"
HON. DON M. DICKINSON, . . . "America's Experience in International Arbitration"
PROF. JEREMIAH W. JENKS, . "Trusts and Industrial Combinations"
HON. FRANK S. MONNETT, . . "Municipal Control of Monopolies in Glasgow"
SENATOR BENJAMIN R. TILLMAN, "The Race Question in the South"

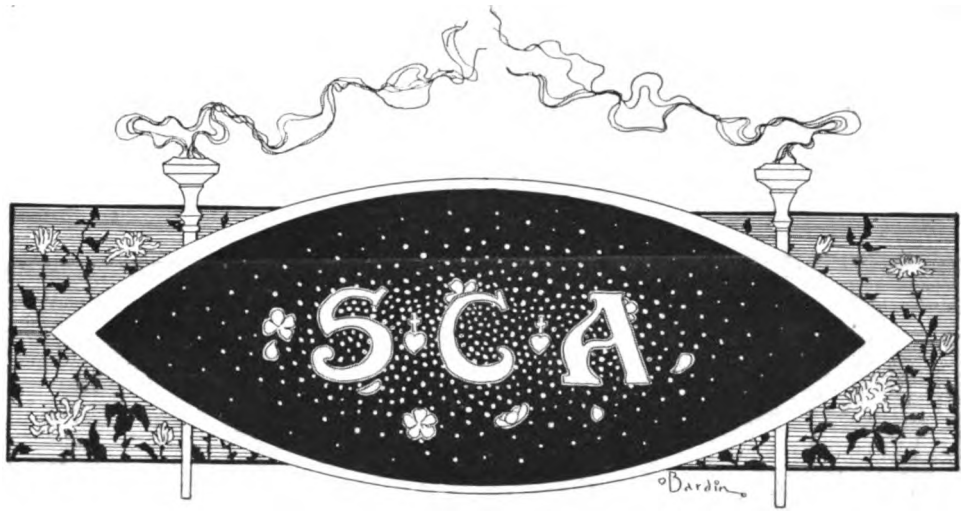

In connection with the work of this Club, the Hon. William J. Bryan last year presented to the University the sum of two hundred and fifty dollars, the income of which was to be devoted annually to giving a prize for the best essay upon some subject connected with government. To this sum the Club added a further sum of two hundred and fifty dollars, the whole constituting the Good Government Club Prize Fund. The fund has been invested under the direction of the Board of Regents, and to control disposition of the present year's income they have appointed a committee consisting of Prof. H. C. Adams and Deans Hudson and Hutchins. This committee has announced that the year's income from the fund will be given as a prize for the best essay upon the subject "The Mayor—What Are his Functions and What Ought they to be?

The Students' Medical Society.

THE Students' Medical Society of the Department of Medicine and Surgery has been in existence for two years. It was organized with the hope that prominent Alumni of this department might be induced to return to their alma mater; the allurement held out to such Alumni, being the privilege of presenting an address before the society. During the past two years a number of alumni have accepted its invitations and given addresses, entertaining and instructive.

Each year two special meetings are arranged for. At one of these meetings, the younger members of the medical faculty present, by way of summary, the results of researches carried on during the year, and it is gratifying to state, that these meetings have been among the best of the series, many of the papers presented being of high standard. The other special meeting, known as "the students' meeting," gives all students who have conducted research work in one of the laboratories or clinical departments, an opportunity to bring forth the results of their studies in short formal papers, in which not only their own investigations, but that of other workers in the same field are discussed. During the present year nearly every student in the department is a member of this society and all the meetings, which are held the second Thursday of each month, have been well attended. The officers of the society are as follows:

C. S. KENNEDY,	President

ILL your tankards deep with wine;
Drink a health to Michigan!
In this sparkling flood, divine,
Drink a health to Michigan!
To the corn flower and the maize—
Autumn skies and opac haze
Of the Indian Summer days.—Drink!
Drink a health to Michigan!

BROTHERS, brim your cups anew;
Drink a health to Michigan!
Toast the Yellow and the Blue;
Drink a health to Michigan!
Let no scoffing lips profane it,
And no one of us abstain it;
Let no cup be full—but drain it.—Drink!
Drink a health to Michigan!

NOW once more the toast around;
Drink a health to Michigan!
'Till the roof with this resound:
Drink a health to Michigan!
To our college, crowned with glory;
To her grey walls, standing hoary
Like some grizzled chief of story.—Drink!
Drink a health to Michigan!

CLINK, a-clink, a-clink, a-clink.
Drink a health to Michigan!
Let your tankards kiss, and drink!
Drink a health to Michigan!
Here's to Her, our Alma Mater;
And to Him, our worthy Pater,
May he live for aye—and later.—Drink!
Drink a health to Michigan!

YET, again, before we go,
Drink a health to Michigan!
While we stand thus, in a row,
Drink a health to Michigan!
In this grapes' blood, red and rare,
Drink we to her daughters, fair;
And our fealty reswear.—Drink!
Drink a health to Michigan!

Amoris Decora.

The Lily.

I AM the flower of Birth-of-Love;
Along the edges of his grove
His raying lamp am I, that sways
In dusk, unentered garden ways;
To me, his first faint words are sweet;
I homeward light forgetful feet,
I am the flower of Birth-of-Love,

The Rose.

I am Love's Rose, the Rose of Love,
My warm, glad heart his pulsings move,
Behold my petals, lo, blood-red,
By me are lovers garlanded;
I shudder at one word they say,
His perfect flower, I live a day;
I am Love's Rose, the Rose of Love.

The Violet.

I am the Flower of After-Love,
My haunts;—small heed have men hereof,
But he who questing for the Rose
Through Love's forsaken garden goes,
Along his path shall find me set;
One word dies on my lips,—forget
I am the flower of After-Love.

To An Ideal Old Age.

T. M. MARSHALL.

LIVE ON, dear lady, for thy life
Is consecrated unto good;
Thy worship, noble when a wife,
Is nobler in thy widowhood.

No thought of self, save self restraint,
Each thought maternal in it's love;
Those knowing thee would call thee saint,
And know thou wilt be saint above.

The sunshine in thy silvern hair
Surrounds thy head with holy light;
Thy features are exceeding fair,
Thy soul shines through like stars at night.

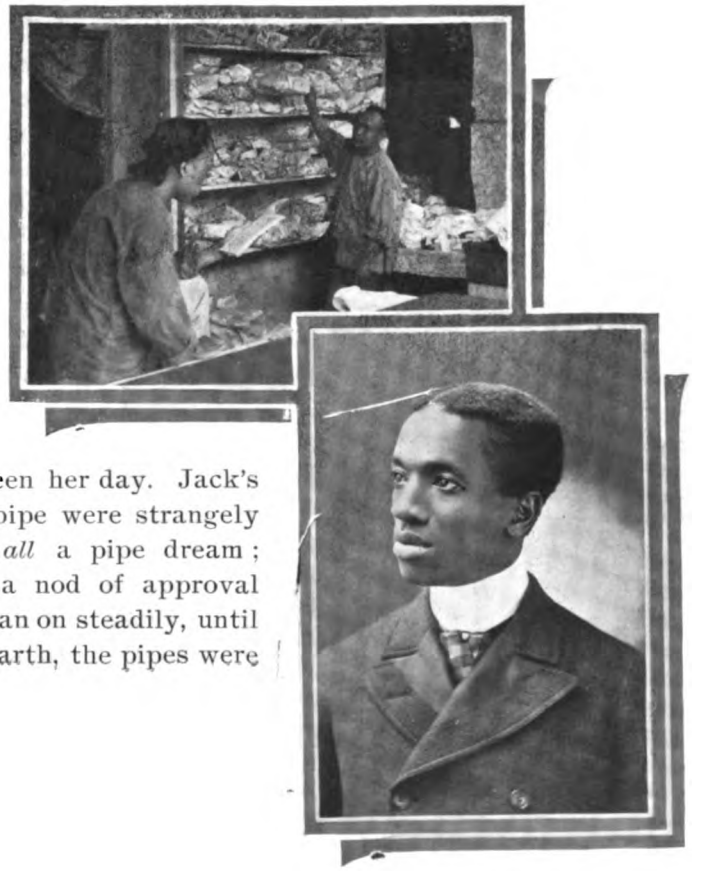

When I am old (if age be mine),
I ask no greater earthly boon,
Than that my life may be like thine,
An old age of perpetual June.

Rejuvenation.

IT was another case of "the senior taking his last glass." Jack's room was fitted for farewells and sad thoughts, anyway. Jack had spent four years in making that room, and as it was, it stood for a whole college course in itself—the books of his freshman year; the pipes and athletic ribbons of his sophomoric grandeur; the faces of his junior loved ones in their black-wood frames; the cap and gown of his seniority.

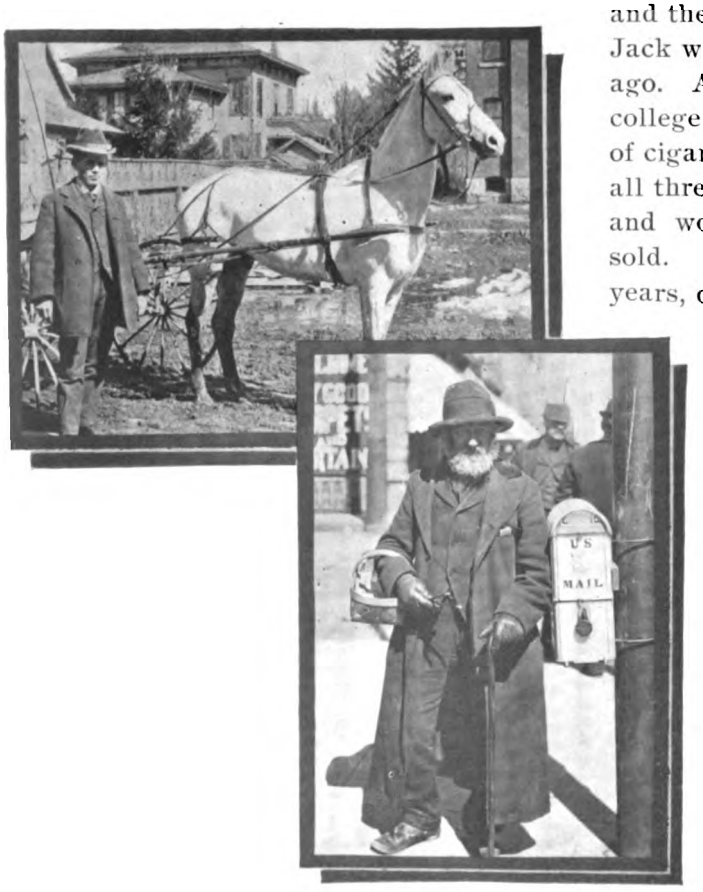

Jack and Bob (we call them Jack and Bob because these are ideal college names) sat in the midst of it all before a lazy grate-fire; for it was one of those uncertain periods of Michigan spring when mid-summer and mid-winter seem to be struggling together. Outside were rain and wind — inside were warmth and glowing briar pipes and a brimming cup or two, and the low voice of one senior telling over old tales with the acquiescence of the other. Jack was moralizing for the benefit of his own conscience and that of Bob, his neighbor. Their college course was almost at its end, and each was wondering what it had amounted to, as many another senior has wondered before, and many another will again ere old Michigan has seen her day. Jack's words and the smoke of Jack's pipe were strangely intermingled. Mayhap it was all a pipe dream; but with an occasional halt for a nod of approval or a tardy thought, Jack's story ran on steadily, until the light flickered low on the hearth, the pipes were out, and the cups were drained.

"Ann Arbor wouldn't be worth all the trouble we take to go to college if it were not for the little things, the little tag ends of the life that make it worth the living. When the perverse winds of the future shall have blown us far apart on the ocean of existence (without seeming prolix, Bob, this will assuredly happen), we shall forget, no doubt, our Law and Economy and History and Greek and Horner's Method and all the rest of it; but those other things, those little bright spots of our career in Ann Arbor will remain with us, eh, Bob? Next month we pack up our cigarette boxes, our mandolins and our books to bid farewell to alma mater. Don't you fancy we'll take a last look - a lingering glance—at the match boy Jimmy, whom we always worshipped from afar and from whom we never bought? No, matches haven't been a part of our curriculum—we always borrowed them or stole them, which was much the same, didn't we Bob? But we liked Jimmy none the less, and it was comforting to know that he was near with plenty of matches, though we still lit our pipes over the gas."

"And it wasn't Jimmy alone, you know; there was that other torture of days gone by—Sailor Jack, who sold matches and occasionally pencils and beguiled us with his stories of the deep blue sea, the Spanish Main, and the Roaring Crags of Caledon, where Sailor Jack wandered in the days of his boyhood long ago. At least so he said, you know, Bob. But college hasn't been all matches and the lighting of cigarettes, pipes, cigars, and the stub ends of all three. There have been clothes that we wore, and worse -- clothes we couldn't wear, and sold. When these come to mind in after years, out of the misty past into startling reality will come, no doubt, 'any ole close,' with the face of Ikey beaming as it beamed for us in '96, 7, 8 and 9—Ikey, the buyer of our worn purple and fine linen, that harbinger of spring and fall alike, the friend of the needy."

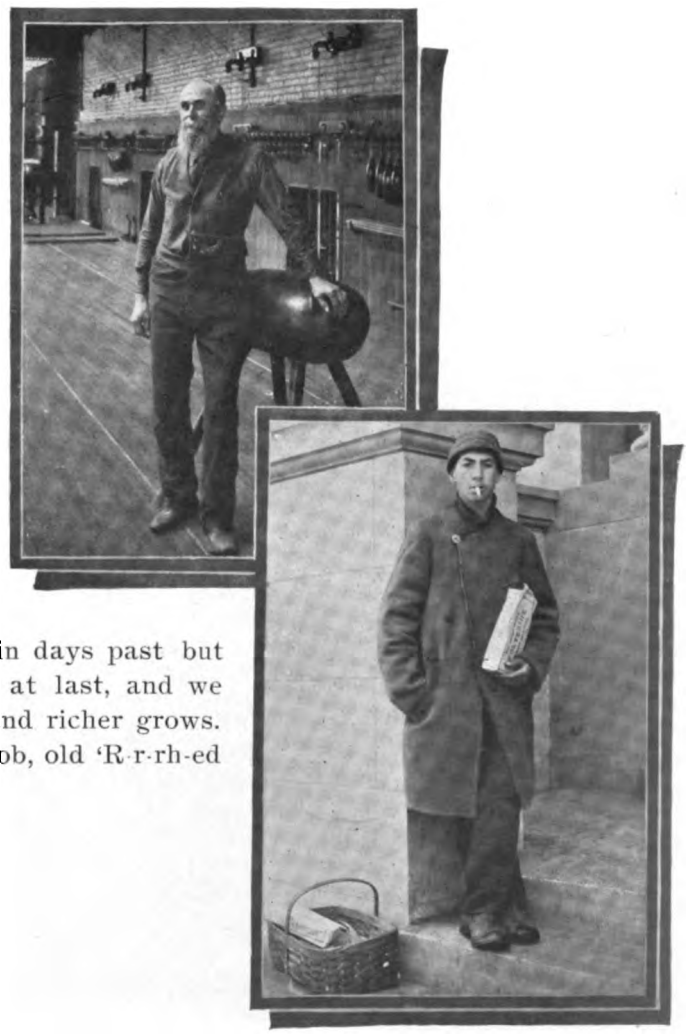

For a few moments the two did not move or speak. The rich, blue-gray clouds were gradually filling the room as both silently and sorrowfully review those four happy years. The fire had settled into a hazy mass of hot coals, and to stop the turn of his thoughts, Jack rose, knocked the ashes from his pipe into the grate, and, turning to his chum, started again."

"I wonder how many men who come to Michigan, and whoever do a tap of gym or athletic work, will ever forget Si? Fine old boy, Bob; good-hearted, patient and always ready to help a fellow when his locker-key is in his other trousers-pocket, or the lock is out of order; always has some odd corner around to put away old football jerseys and stockings, when November ice, water and mud have done their best to assimilate them. Think of it, Bob—what the gym would be without Si. Bob,—here's to him."

"And before our farewell glance, comes Hing—you know Hing, Bob?—the little celestial who has taken our collars and shirts and all that. He only brought back a few 'maimed and smitten things'; but we love him, just the same. He is part of the Michigan whole. Ah, Hing, I drink to thine oriental self. Adieu! And Bob, there have been parties that we visited in our glory, where we frittered away our time in the glad springtide of collegiate youth. What was a party without Davy? Yes, Bob, we will recall Davy, that Black Prince of Porters who, no doubt, will still be carrying ices for beautiful co-eds and gallant men long ages after we have been dead and buried far beneath the succeeding classes. David, fare thee well!

"Then, Bob, we shall recall our shadow, that 'accusing sprite with doleful wail,' that man with many businesses, but 'no one of them his own,' to-wit, Shorty. Did you say damn, Bob? Well, Shorty has been disturbing in days past but all his compound interest bills are paid at last, and we didn't kill him after all. Shorty lives and richer grows. And our friend from the Emerald Isle, Bob, old 'R-r-rh-ed

H-hots'—can we leave him without a pain at hearts? Sausages, mustard, dog-can, buns, smoky lamps and all! What a perfect whole he did constitute; and that brogue—ah! Bob, that brogue would make the Lord Mayor of Dublin emerald with envy. Yes, here's to Pat, Mike, Brian Boru, Erin g'br-a-agh, whichever you choose—the noblest Roman of 'em all.

"And finally, Bob, there have been drinks that we drank—some slowly, some swiftly, some mellow and brown, some red as the grape's blood, and some white, sparkling and effervescent. So we will remember that table—long, brown, polished and carven,—where were the names of the great and the small of democratic old Michigan, with the block M over all; where we sat and sang and talked, and dreamed dreams through the bottoms of our glasses when the amber had gone low—that initial table down at Joe's. Look at them all. Twenty years later these will you remember when the other things are forgotten, Bob."

The pipes were out; the fire was low; the rain still beat against the shutters.

Michigan to the Century.

OH Years of the Nineteen-hundred,
The peoples press into your halls.
They are coming to fight your battles;
Their trophies will mark your walls.
And some are worthy the struggle,
But many, so many, moan
With the wrongs of twenty centuries,
And nerveless fall at your throne.
Oh years that sit in judgment,
Worth thousands of these worn lives,
Upon your scorn-trod threshold
Jests a band without the gyves.
They jest; they are strong in their friendships;
They jest; college battles are won;
But the earnest of parted effort
Strikes its minor into the tone.
I have strengthened their native fiber
With the rich truth of the years;
I have sealed me their allegiance
With Michigan's laughter and tears.
I have brooded over their pages
Till the long, slant sunset ray
Struck through old Tappan's branches
And startled the rafters' gray.
For all my best traditions
Are their very warp and woof.
Oh Years of the Nineteen-hundred,
Ye shall put them to the proof.
And though the task be mighty,
They are strong in heart and nerve,
And our spirits are riveted ever;
Ye cannot the linking swerve.
What I have done soon is a memory,
But a memory of priceless worth.
Oh Years of the Nineteen-hundred,
Curse not, but bless richly their birth.

The Love of Her.

R. R. KIRK.

HEN the leaves of the maples were turning
To purple and crimson and gold,
And the willows were gold by the river,
And the meadows were bronzed and old;
When the marshes were purple with asters,
And the hills aglow with the glory
Of golden-rod—and jewelled with rose pods—
'Tis then commences my story.

The glorious sun had arisen
And the mist between us a veil
To withhold his golden arrows,
When there came a fair lady pale.
And her tresses were spun sunshine,
And I could not behold her eyes,
For they were the heavenly azure
Of an angel's of paradise.

As white as the birch tree gleameth
Through the haze of an autumn day
Was her hand; and as song one dreameth,
So sweet her tongue's melody;
And her feet on the grasses tinkled,
As a brook sings toward the sea;
And she was as lithe as the willow,
And stood as a hemlock tree.

I was a Shepherd lad lowly,
And tended my sheep for hire;
And she was the gentle daughter
Of a rich and haughty sire.
But love hath no kin of station,
And knoweth no worldly pride;
And one word softly spoken

I was a shepherd lad lowly,
But her kiss hath crowned me a king;
And the love of her enriched me,
That I want not anything.
And be it Rose-time or Winter
I live in that day of old,
When the leaves of the maple were turning
To purple and crimson and gold.

Polly's Moods.

R. R. KIRK.

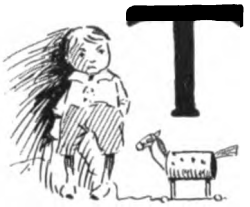

HEN Polly's laughing, I can clearly hear
The bubbling music of a meadow brook,
That, in and out, its wayward courses took,
By sun-kissed hill, through copses sun-forsook;
A mirthful thing, that of a summer's night
Sang to the stars a song of pure delight.
Here 'tis again, after many a year,
In Polly's laughing.

When Polly's weeping, I can plain discern
The unannounced, unheralded
Advent of April rain:
Skies quickly darken, on the roof o'erhead
The swift drops patter, and on window pane.
The wind blows fiercely; and tall pine and fern
Bow low before Boreas' ambassador. Just then
The sun shines out;—and Polly smiles again!

An Advent.

D. C. O.

THE mother of John Henry said it would be the "recherche" stunt for him to hie himself to the Use of M., and absorb some higher education in his acquisitive sponge. John's father took her word for it and was willing to play bank, so John got under way. He was one of those specimens which mothers point out as a model for wayward sons, but the girls all thought him a tout. He shunned the glamour of feminine association and put up his fins in holy horror at the sight of a hammock by moonlight.

On the train coming down he debated about the "frat" he would board at, and frappéed all the advances of the peanut clerk.

John was a bit jarred at the appearance of the human zöological garden at the station. He knew he had them all kenoed with his yellow shoes and black fedora. John was wrestling with his grip and telescoped when a huge gazabo with a blue sweater flagged him and enquired the direction of his course. John did not approve of such undue familiarity and drew himself up like a waiter-lady resenting a request for a second piece of pie, and loped to his cage in a good family residence.

John felt hurt when all did not shake hands with him and tell him to make himself at home, and wondered why the laconic maiden behind the bars did not call him "mister." John thought maybe they did not know that his father kept the "General Emporium" at home, and did not recognize his social position. Soon it bored into him that the earth did not tip up when he walked, and people were always busiest when he had most to say.

He was spotted for a "come-on" right at the start off, and bought enough campus and general privilege tickets to paper his room with, at from three to five cases per. When he put up his hand in class, some one on the seat back would aid him to rise with a bunch of leather-bound pedal extremity. In such a case he would reproachfully wrinkle up his map and make some cutting drive about "no gentleman," and bloat himself up on his superior breeding. John saw people with initials on their sweaters. He tried it and limped for two days.

Once John was invited to a "hot frat" for dinner. He put on his lawn tie and duck vest and was ready to join. He was a liberal cuss with his advice to seniors about their work and did his best to warble out their songs. Finally he asked them to sing something they all knew. They had him framed up to rights and shook him at the S. C. A. He never did approve of frats anyway. After due manipulation of his intellectual centre, he decided there was nothing in Ann Arbor except himself, he did have any great lumps of affection for, so he became a successful student, graduated with honors, and can now be found dispensing everything from condensed milk to plow points in his progenitor's old hang-out.

Moral.—If you are swelled on yourself, you are apt to get punctured in a college town.

[While literary merit can not be claimed for the above, the editors feel that it portrays many of the side pictures of college life that it would be impossible to set forth in a more dignified article, and therefore have published it.]

To Robby.

IN lang syne past, thro' many ages,
Philosophers, learn'd men, and sages,
With transcendental dialectics,
With syntheses all a priori,
And reasonings most secretori,
Have caused their share of epileptics.

From Bonny Scotland, thro' time alway,
Philosophy has held her sway,
And ever will and ever can.
So here's to Robbie her wise son,
Whose fame throughout this land doth run,
We love to honor such a man.

WHEN the wealth of bud and blossom spends its sweetness on the breeze,
When the music of the waters weds the bird-song in the trees,
In the laughing days of springtime, when the river's running high,
And the sun is shining brightly from the blue, unclouded sky,

I wander by the Huron, where the waving willows' dip
Interrupts the low, sweet laughter of the water's liquid lip,
And all the world seems happy and suits my every wish,
When, alone beside the river, I can sit and dream and fish.

O, the castles I have builded by the river there alone,
Where nature's voices whispered the thoughts that were my own!
O, how many times my fish-pole dipped idly in the stream,
As Fancy's rose-lights gathered o'er some happy love-lit dream!

O, bright days! Thy simple sweetness shall be with me to the end.
Oft in memory I will wander back again to Cedar Bend,
With its bird-song and its sunshine, with the river's sweep and swish,
And again, as in Life's springtime, I will sit and dream and fish.

Eden.

T. M. MARSHALL.

THE minstrel sung of a time as old
As the first great dawn of day,
Of the time when men knew not of gold,
And nobody worked for pay.

Oh that was the time ere the birth of kings,
When man was the forest god,
And a gem was only a pretty stone
That the sunlight lit in the sod.

The minstrel sung of the birth of love
And its twin, the ugly hate,
And they clutched each one the other tight,
And the union man called fate.

And things of earth from the things of use
Turned into the bart of men,
And man's domain o'er the wealth of earth
Glimmered and vanished then.

Oh ye who work for the love of gold,
And not for the joy of toil,
Look back to the time when the great of earth
Were the sons of the hardy soil.

Look back to the birth of the human kind,
Look back to the first great dawn,
And catch a glimpse of the peace of life
That to thee has bowed and gone.

Bill Kelly's "Spiel" to the Jury.

ER Honor and gintlemen of the jur-r-r-y.

Oi come before yez today a humble attor-r-r-ny frish from the Ould Dart. Oi am not on to the quips and tur-r-rns of a Yankee lawyer's brain.

So Oi ask the pardon of your Highness if Oi same to digress from me subject.

But as Oi said Oi come before yez because Oi come before yez. Oi am before yez because yez are here and Oi am here, and as we are both here we are all here, and as we are all here and as Oi am standing before yez, Oi am before yez.

But Oi come to ask if yez twelve honor-r-r-able and thrue gintlemin, of the greatest University of the greatest countr-r-r-y of wor-r-r-ld kin stand boi and see sich rank injustice done.

Yez see before yez my most rispicted and lowly patron. Can yez imagine awnything graner or more easily wor-r-r-kud than my aforsaid patron, a farmer living chu miles from Upsilanti, by name Bill Day?

Can yez stand boi and see this same specimen of humanity, without a cint in his pocket, without a crust in the house to feed his star-r-r-ving woife and twelve childer with, and not a drop of the red liquor in the dimijohn?

Oi say kin yez stand for it, all on account of two blackguardly skinners and grane goods min taking all his wheat and niver paying a cint, 'cause the're elevator bur-r-rnt down. Whoi did he put it in an elevator? 'Cause so whin there wuz a foire they could kape on elevating it until it was out of reach of the all devouring elements. But did they do this? Of cour-r-r-se not.

Didn't they stand around and watch it burn, and when the poor mon asked for his money they give him the laugh. Oi ask yez agin, "Kin yez stand for it?"

Yes ask if he had or would pay for that same storage of his grain. Of cour-r-r-se he would. He is an honest mon even if he does live near Upsilanti.

And now gintlemin Oi would loike to go on at great length on this subject, but Oi see by your noble and ixpressive countenances that yez are already in favor of giving me client the verdict, so Oi will lave yez with me conscience clear, that Oi have done right and yez will lift the clouds of dispair off the brow of my client by giving him a judgment of $6,400, against these town swindlers, Chamberlin & Anderson. With this Oi will lave you to the tender mercies of John Brondig if he has any.

To Her.

T. M. M.

DEEP blue eyes and drooping lashes,
Rosy cheeks and midnight hair;
Smiles that come in lightning flashes,
For her man would do and dare.

All her movements telling graces
That the gods of Greece possessed,
To her finger tips the traces
Of a beauty truly best.

Were I artist I would try
Sketches of her day by day,
Till the beauty of her eye
With my brush I'd steal away.

A Song of Merriment.

FAREWELL, you lonesome ditties,
That were void of jest and mirth,
I have sold you to the beggars
And you brought what you were worth.

For a Season I will linger
In the land of love and wine,
I will sup with Bacchanalians
In the shadow of the vine.

I will dance with merry women
To the quickstep of the lute,
Get thee gone, ye modern beldames,
With your China God salute.

I will sing a song of laughter
Wilder than the mocking sea,
And the world though gay and sober
Shall come forth and laugh with me.

Come with me and look but calmly;
There is laughter in each sin,
For the world today is better
Than it e'er before has been.

Benjamin Franklin from Retirement.

ELOISE STANDISH MORTON.

FOR years I stood upon the campus, a witness of the scenes of college life, and well I knew its phases. Cast off by an irreverent generation, in exile I recall the familiar scenes, and tell over the tales I have known. One has for me a particular interest, for in it I played a part. I call it the romance of the little maid.

She was young and as bright as the spring day that brought her here to see Jimmie and to hear the Festival music in the great hall over which I watched. Petite, you would call her, and her feet could scarcely be decorous, as she tripped along beside him. I heard her always laughing as they passed me, and her voice was sweet to hear. People turned to look at her, and smiled as they do upon a child, and innocently she smiled back at them. Now, the campus girls were staid and dignified—they never noticed me—and I was drawn to this fluttering little creature. I liked her bowing saucily to me and saying, "How do you do today, Benjamin Franklin?" She and Jimmie passed me many times and it was happiness to see them, her sunshine reflecting itself in his face. His voice was tender when he spoke to her, and he bent upon her a proud look of ownership as she walked beside him. It was easy to read it all.

Sometimes her mother was with them, but the last night they were out alone. I heard them coming up the walk, but this time she was not laughing. She was talking earnestly to him, and I could hear his voice protesting, assuring her of something. They approached me there in the moonlight, and she drew him towards me. Laying her small hands on my feet, she looked up at me and said softly, "Benjamin Franklin, you'll take care of Jimmie for me, won't you?"

Digitized by Google

After that Jimmie for many weeks never passed me without a glance, and often when he went by alone he said, "How do you do today, Benjamin Franklin?" I knew when her letters came, too, for he went to the postoffice on those nights, and his voice was cheerier as he repeated, in passing, the little maid's greeting.

I grew to look for Jimmie and to single him out from the crowds that passed, and I seldom failed of a look from him. The little maid's words rang in my ears, "Benjamin Franklin, you'll take care of Jimmie for me, won't you?"

Then came a change. Jimmie passed me one day with never a glance, and again the next day, until I could not doubt that the slight was intentional. I missed the little maid's greeting which he had been used to repeat, and I heard her charge me now, almost in a sob, "Take care of Jimmie for me, Benjamin Franklin." Now, when I caught a glimpse of Jimmie's face, it wore an unhappy look. I thought he needed the little maid. His face grew harder as the days passed, and longer intervals elapsed between the times I saw him.

At last one morning he went by with a beautiful woman, and in a flash I understood. He turned his face quickly from me and smiled upon her. She was tall and dark. She wore long trailing skirts that rustled as she walked, and men stared in admiration of her. I stared, too, but with different feelings. I was sorrowing for the little maid. Jimmie was dazzled by the woman, and every day drifted farther from my care. The woman talked brilliantly, and, I venture, of things the little maid never knew. For, once, I heard her speak of affinities and destiny. That day the little maid was leagues and leagues away, and Jimmie's eyes were dazed. Later he wandered past me in the moonlight and turned his troubled eyes upon me. I fancied that he half said the old phrase, "How do you do today, Benjamin Franklin?" But he turned slowly and walked away.

The next day came and I saw Jimmie do a strange thing. He bowed distantly to the dark-browed woman and met her smile unmoved. That night he came back from the postoffice happy, and his voice was husky as he said, now quite audibly, "How do you do today, Benjamin Franklin?"

The little maid will come in June to see Jimmie graduate. I shall not see her, but she will know that Benjamin Franklin has kept his charge.

When Hearts Are Kin.

R. R. KIRK.

WITHOUT, the storm doth wail; within,
The glasses clink, the wine doth flow
In merry-wise. When hearts are kin,
What matter tho' the Northwind blow!

When hearts are kin, why heed the storm!
For laughter is a summer breeze,
And here is sunshine full as warm
As melts the winter from the trees.

When hearts are kin! Then drink with me
In this red vintage, man to man
In strong array from sea to sea:
The Kindred Hearts of Michigan.

....A new student's text-book....

HAMILTON'S GOULD ON PLEADING

Since its first appearance in 1832 James Gould's work on Pleading has been the standard work on that subject for the use of law students, and has for years in many law colleges been used as a text-book.

Pleading, as well other departments of the law has undergone many changes since Mr. Gould wrote his treatise. Many matters treated in the original work are now obsolete and serve only to confuse rather than enlighten, while new matters not there treated require explanation to the modern law student.

In ten years' work as instructor and lecturer on this subject the editor, Mr. Adelbert Hamilton, of Chicago, using Gould's work as a basis, has gathered many notes relative to these changes and additions, and these have been embodied in a reprint of the work, bringing it down to 1899, and making it answer exactly the needs of the modern law student The original text has been preserved when possible, and distinguished from the new matter by quotation marks. Enough citation of case authority is given for student purposes, and the simpler and elementary forms are also incorporated.

In many Colleges of Law, perhaps in most, the text-books on Pleading are more or less inadequate. When this is the case we will be pleased to furnish the instructor in this department the fullest opportunity for looking into the merits of this work, with a view to its introduction. We invite correspondence in this line.

New Rochester

stamped on a lamp indicates the highest pinnacle of lamp goodness yet attained. It may be possible to make a better lamp, but the way to do it has not yet been found. When it is, the New Rochester will be made that way, you may be sure.
